The most carriest and vehement of all Coriderate newspapers, in sustreasing for the ramoval of Gen. Bragg, was the Atlanta Cospierocy. That journal thus frankly gives up th cause:
But the deed is done, and cannot be undone. We leave it to its results; our hands at least are weeked; they are clean. Whatever may happen it cannot be said of us, "You knew, said spoke not." We nave spoken warmly, strongly, but frankly, honestly, it is idle to conseal the fact that we have no confidence in Gen. Bragg. But we shall not pursue him. On the contrary, we wish him had speed to victory. We shall be ready to ascribe all our opinions of him, if he only brings us victory. May the great God, who rules the winds and the waves, who gives the battle not always to the strong, give it to him. the battie not always to the strong, give it to him.

Gertainly, the Confederacy is justified in clasming that it is not responsible for the re-tention of a General. And it is well for u-time the decision of a temporam suffice is in other hands.
